Art scene

FAMILY SHOW: Alexander, Yvonne, Arthur and Jamie Boyd with Galeria Aniela owner Aniela Kos (second from right) in 1997.

Rare works at Boyd show

A Kangaroo Valley art gallery will play host to a special show next month.

An exhibition marking the great artistic contribution made by the Boyd family will travel from London to Kangaroo Valley next month.

A Century of Boyd will be launched by former prime minister Bob Hawke at Galeria Aniela on March 24.

More than 100 modern masterpieces will fill three exhibition rooms with large bronzes extending into grounds of the eight-acre sculpture park.

The collection is drawn from the private collection of the Boyd family, with works on loan from Bundanon.

The grand treat for art lovers will be the previously unseen Arthur Boyd, Lost Bride circa 1955-57, that was hidden for almost six decades and is now for the first time on public viewing.

From the original Bride series, Lost Bride was discovered totally by chance, by Jamie Boyd, concealed on two pieces of board that were screwed to the base of his father's old art-trolley.

The Bride series reveals Boyd's respect for individualism and liberty and was influenced by his encounter with Aboriginal people during the trip he made to Alice Springs in 1951.

Jamie Boyd and his wife Helena will make a trip from London to attend the launch and to commemorate this special occasion those attending the launch will receive special souvenirs.

Galeria Aniela, chosen because of the long relationship owner Aniela Kos has had with the Boyd family, will be the only venue in Australia to show the collection.

SHOALHAVEN SUNSET: This oil on copper painted by Arthur Boyd around 1976 inspired a Google logo which was used for Boyd's 90th birthday.

Spray what you mean

Artist Danial Kelly put on a special show decorating a van at the opening of his exhibition Illiterati last week.

A local indigenous artist, Kelly has been painting for 11 years and has held five exhibitions.

He has also created public art in Nowra, Wollongong, Sydney, Melbourne and New York.

"The art is letters basically coming to life," says Kelly, who calls his work bio digital funk.

"Bio meaning organic, digital meaning hard edged and new, funk being style."

AUTO ART: Danial Kelly gives a car a special spray.
